Table of Contents

Foreword: Questioning Digital Technologies, Forensics, and Human Rights Law 7

Acknowledgements 13

Introduction 15

I Re/Definition of Major Notions and Their Contextualization . . 29

Database 29

Archive 34

Foucault's Governmentality and Biopolitics within Modernity in the West 39

Capitalism, Biopolitics, Necropolitics and the Forensic Turn 47

Knowledge Production. 53

Digital Paradigm 57

State of Control, Communicative Capitalism and Digital Colonialism 61

II Database as Governmental Technology 65

Institutionalized Archive and the Modern Order 65

Paradigms of Archival Science as Paradigms of the Hegemonic Frame of Western Modernity. 94

Database as Governmental Technology and Changing Relations within Governmentality 102

III Geopolitics of the Archive and Positioning of Art Practices in Relation to Knowledge Production and Digital Coloniality . . 115

Specificities of New Media Development in Former Yugoslavia and Some Postsocialist Countries in the 1990s 115

Role of Institutional Archives in Making the Visible Legible and Distribution of the Sensible/Demand for a New Visibility. 132

IV Reformulation of the Archive through or against the Database (and Maybe Vice Versa) 151

Destabilization, Politicization and Reformulation of the Archive in Relation to the Database. 151

Archive: Benjamin, Foucault, Derrida, Agamben 167

Database: Manovich, Hayles, Chun, Dean 217

V Rearticulating Knowledge Production in Relation to the Forensic Turn and the Regime of Digital Coloniality 275

Matrices of Publicity (Visibility, Legality) and Secrecy (Invisibility, Criminality) 279

Body as Archive/Database 288

Digital Power of Identification, Calculation and Ordering 302

(De)Subjectivization through Digitalization and Shifting Relations between Subject and Object 313

Practices and Forms of Knowledge Production, Visibility and Bosnian Forensic Contemporaneity 338

VI Conclusions: Potentiality of Archive, Strategies for Resisting Archival Violence and the Process of Decoloniality . . 347

Potentiality of Archive, Strategies for Resisting Archival Violence and the Process of Decoloniality 347

Bibliography 363

Index rerum et nominorum 393